The Bluebird Report

Our Innsbrook bluebirds are slowing down. Only 22 pairs have a third nest for the year. These nests contain 42 eggs and 36 chicks.

The hot weather is definitely here so please check your nest boxes to make sure they have ventilation holes on the sides. There should be three half-inch holes near the top of each side. Also, remember to put out fresh water in your bird bath each day. All the songbirds will appreciate a clean drink of water

Please send your bluebird reports and/or questions to Shirley at saritsema@gmail.com.

IBK Fishing Club Tip of the Week: After the Rain

Innsbrook has been hit with more than its fair share of storms this summer. While the weather impacts us on land, it also changes fishing conditions. For about 36 hours after a big rainfall, fishing is often terrible. Fish gorge during a rain, and they feast on food washed into the lake from runoff. After the big meal and having a harder time seeing in the stained water, fish will stop feeding for a day or more. However, on day two following a big rain, the bite turns on, and it can be voracious. As a rule of thumb, wait two days after a rain. Then get ready to set the hook.

Please let us know if you have any questions about fishing or maybe a good tip and we will be glad to add it to our list. Please send all requests to innsbrookfishingclub@gmail.com.

NATURE NOTES

You may have noticed Innsbrook's newest residents while on an afternoon walk or a cruise on Lake Aspen. Eighteen rehabilitated Mallards were released on July 19 at the boat ramp near Mooring Marina on Lake Aspen by the Wildlife Rescue Center.

The mallards released were from a few different groups of orphaned ducklings who were brought to the Wildlife Rescue Center from around St. Louis County at the end of May and early June. When they arrived at the Wildlife Rescue Center, they were just a few days old and weighed about 30 g each. They spent their first week in waterfowl brooders, specially designed for very young ducks and geese. Then they graduated to a hutch where they had more space to run around, but still received supplemental heat. After a few weeks, they transitioned to the waterfowl porch where they got their first pool to swim in. The final stage is the Center's large outdoor aviary where they had lots of space to roam and a bigger pool for swimming so they could get stronger before their release.

Mallards are one of our most common water birds and a species that plays a big part in maintaining biodiversity in wetlands, lakes, and ponds. As they feed on plants in the water, they ingest a variety of seeds. When they move around to different feeding spots and to their roosting areas, they take those seeds with them and spread them around (when they poop). They create and fortify plant diversity wherever they go!

The Wildlife Rescue Center treats hundreds of mallards, wood ducks, and Canadian geese every year. As a nonprofit,the Wildlife Rescue Center relies on donations and volunteers to help carry out their Mission. To learn more about how to help local wildlife or support the Center, visit mowildlife.org.
