Summer Breeze Concert: Javier Mendoza

Saturday, August 18 at 7:30 p.m., FH

Back by popular demand, Javier Mendoza guarantees an eclectic show for the whole family. Singer-songwriter, guitarist, storyteller. Singing in both English and Spanish, Javier Mendoza brings his culture out in a pop-rock sort of way. He says his original style is influenced by artists such as Death Cab For Cutie, Juanes, Radio Head, Coldplay and Los Lobos. His powerful voice and lyrics inherently connect to his audience. Javier's list of career highlights is long and impressive... his latest title: Best Male Solo Artist in 2011 Riverfront Times Music Awards. He has recently released his 10th studio album. Javier's song "Beautiful" was featured on Billboard Top 100. He also has had several songs on MTV's Real World. FREE. Bring lawn chairs. Concessions will be open. Rain or shine. Ext. 180.

Summer Breeze Concert:

Seven Bridges Road

Saturday, August 25 at 7:30 p.m., FH

Fans of The Eagles will love Seven Bridges Road. This band harkens to the days of Don Henley and the boys. This five-piece ensemble features Farrell Webber, Larry Smith, John Tellman, Mark Crowel and Rob Sherman — all virtuoso instrumentalists as well as seasoned vocalists from St. Louis in the midst of their 7th year of touring! FREE. Bring lawn chairs. Concessions will be open. Rain or shine. Ext. 180.

NATURE NOTE

Watch for Purple Martins Gathering to Migrate

Purple martins are among the most endearing of Missouri's birds. Their cheerful calls, graceful flight and habit of colonizing and returning to a landlord's setup of houses or gourds year after year make them one of the most enchanting of our bird species. Purple martins migrate to South America in the winter, departing Missouri by late August.

The round-trip journey is a drawn-out affair. Migrants from southern Canada occasionally may be heard crossing Missouri in October. The first arrivals during spring migration arrive in Florida during the month of January. Older martins will return year after year to established sites. Subadults are more easily attracted to new sites. However, older birds whose nests were disrupted, especially by predators, seek out new sites as well. Because martins return to breeding sites in early spring, they often are confronted with life-threatening weather conditions. Cold rains may eliminate flying insects, the main source of martins' food. Rainy or cold periods of weather longer than three or four days may cause widespread death in purple martin populations in the region. During bad weather some landlords place thawed crickets, meal worms and cooked eggs on elevated platforms or even fling the food into the air using a slingshot or large plastic spoon. Fall gatherings of martins offer a spectacular wildlife event that is a thrill to watch. In August, martins gather in large roosts that can grow to include hundreds of thousands of birds. This usually occurs near wetlands or along rivers or lakes. As they do with their housing, martins tend to return to the same fall roosts year after year.
