Security Tips

Getting rid of your old ammo is relatively easy, but safely disposing is crucial. Contact your local department's non-emergency to arrange pickup or inquire about drop-off options. WCDSD can be reached at 636.456.4332 or dispatch at 636.456.7088 for assistance. Gun ranges may take unused ammo or duds. If the ammo can't be used, they will know how to dispose of it properly. Reach out to your local gun ranges to inquire about accepting your ammo.

Ammo is considered hazardous waste and must be disposed properly. For hazardous waste disposal, check city and county websites for collection facilities or upcoming hazardous waste events.

Important Information About Your Innsbrook Alarm System

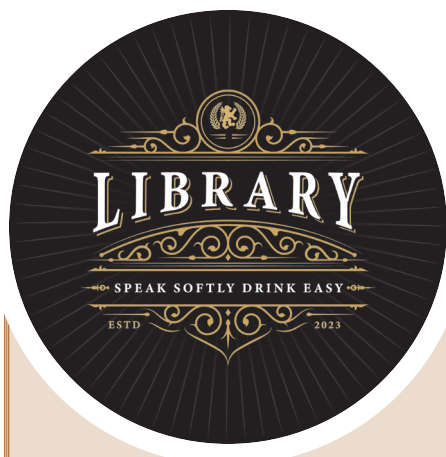

In a continued effort to eliminate malfunctioning and outdated alarm systems, Innsbrook Utilities has begun contacting individual residents to inquire about upgrading to the new system or opting out of monitoring. An email regarding alarm systems that are experiencing issues such as false alarms, communication failures, or have had no activity for the past several years, will be sent on Friday, March 8. If you receive one of these emails, please respond promptly if you are interested in upgrading or if you would like to opt out of monitoring. A follow-up email will be sent in April, and any alarms that have not been addressed by May will no longer be monitored. Residents can choose to opt back into monitoring and upgrade their system at any time.

If you are unaware of the type of alarm system your property has and whether updates are needed, please email alarmsystems@innsbrook-resort.com and visit your Property Owner Portal at <https://ibkapps.innsbrook-resort.com/ibk-resident/>.

If you haven't been following the progress of the IHS's barn razing project, here's a Reader's Digest version of events over the last year.

In the Spring of 2023, Mike and Diane Vaughn, Innsbrook neighbors who live on Paul Rd., generously donated their late 19th century barn to the IHS. A good part of the balance of the year was spent dismantling it and bringing the wood to our historic site.

In December, we were able to pour the concrete for the pad for the "to be rebuilt" barn. The original barn was 26' x 40'. Currently, we are rebuilding it with "additions" on both sides, which will result in a completed building which will measure about 40' x 40'. Progress on the barn has been steady, and while we don't have any firm completion date in mind, rest assured that our crew will be hard at it for the foreseeable future.

How can you help? Membership in the IHS is the most practical way to be a part of the project. A membership application form can be found at www.innsbrookhistoricalsociety.org. If you have questions about membership or any other questions about the IHS, don't hesitate to call Dave at 314.704.7001.

NATURE NOTES

Outdoor Fashion: Fur and Feathers

The intricate outer wear of animals serves as a marvel of both function and fashion, providing vital protection against the elements while inspiring designers with its beauty and versatility.

FUR

In the animal kingdom, fur acts as a vital shield, insulating creatures against the cold and moisture of winter. Comprising guard hairs and underfur, this natural armor not only keeps animals warm but also repels water and prevents wear. As winter approaches, mammals grow their fur to its fullest, known as the “prime” coat, which often takes on a striking blue or creamy white hue due to reduced blood flow and pigment production. Come spring, shedding begins, marking the transition to warmer weather.

FEATHERS

Feathers, unique to birds, serve a multitude of functions beyond flight. These engineering marvels provide insulation, aid in display, and even contribute to a bird’s aerodynamics. Containing numerous microscopic parts, feathers are meticulously maintained through preening, ensuring their continued effectiveness. Contour feathers cover the body and facilitate flight, while down feathers offer unparalleled warmth and insulation. Birds also employ oil glands to waterproof their wings, enabling seamless navigation through wind and water.

In the intricate world of nature, fur and feathers stand as testaments to both form and function, showcasing the ingenuity of evolution and captivating the imagination of observers and designers alike.
