Bluebird Trail Report:

The Innsbrook Bluebird Trail is starting its 27th year of monitoring our local bluebirds. The original trail was started in 1997 by the Innsbrook Garden Club. It started with just 12 nest boxes. We now monitor over 170 nest boxes each week. There are 20 faithful monitors reporting each week of the breeding season. Last year, our bluebirds fledged 834 chicks and since 1997, we have fledged 12,247 chicks!

This year, our birds are off to an amazing start with a reported 88 nests containing 246 eggs and 12 chicks have already hatched. They have never started this strongly before, it should be an awesome season.

If you would like to join in the fun, installed nest boxes are available for a $60 donation to the Innsbrook Bluebird Trail. For more information, please contact Shirley at: saritsema@gmail.com.

Owls at IBK

Luna's owl, Capricorn, is growing bigger by the day. The photo on the right shows her looking out at the eclipse on Monday, April 8, with her mom. They were pretty quiet sitting side by side.

IBK Fishing Club Tips

When fishing for bedding bass, the indirect approach is best. Bass come shallow to spawn. The fish have been known to spawn in as little as one foot of water. Although an angler with polarized glasses may be able to see the fish, casting right at them will not often produce bites. The fish are likely to flee an invasive lure. The right approach is to fish on the edges of the nests. Move lures slowly and target them about a foot away from the fish. It may take multiple casts, but the bass will react. Often the bump the lure or briefly mouth it to move it away from their nests. Once the fish engages the lure, instead of fleeing from it, you'll have them.

NATURE NOTES

2024 "Cicada-geddon"

This spring, billions of cicada beetles will chorus together as two broods emerge from their years-long slumber. With the longest lifespan of any insect, periodical cicadas are native to Missouri. The broods — groups of cicadas that share the same emergence years — will appear in 18 Midwestern states in late April and early May. This year, Brood XIII, which comes out every 17 years, and Brood XIX, which comes out every 13 years, will join together in the magical display of emerging together this spring right in our backyards.

The last time this historic event took place was when Thomas Jefferson was president, decades before Missouri statehood. The next overlapping event will be in the year 2245.

For the most part, most Missourians will only experience Brood XIX, the Great Southern Brood, which last appeared in Missouri in 2011. Those in northeastern Missouri near the Illinois border might see — and hear — both broods. The synchronized male singing can be louder than a jet engine.

Cicada nymphs emerge when the soil warms to 64 degrees and dig their way out of the ground. They subscribe to the "safety in numbers" approach and emerge all at once. They climb trees, fence posts or anything vertical before shedding their hard skins. Then they head to treetops to mate, lay their eggs and die within four to six weeks.

Expect to see cicadas after a spring rain, and expect to see a lot of them — as many as 1.5 million per acre. This creates a feeding frenzy for predators and litter so heavy that the sidewalks and highways may need shoveling. Cicadas, while loud and messy, are harmless to humans and their pets. They don't sting or bite.

University of Missouri Extension Horticulture Specialist, Tamra Reall, warns against using pesticides that will harm birds and beneficial insects such as butterflies, bees and moths. If there is concern about new trees or bushes, protect them with a loose cover of cheesecloth.
