Bluebird Trail Report:

There are three different species of bluebirds in the United States. Our Eastern Bluebird, the Mountain Bluebird and the Western Bluebird. The Eastern Bluebird male has a red-brown throat and upper chest with a blue back. The female is more two-toned with a dull reddish brown front and a blue-gray head and back. The Eastern Bluebird breeds throughout the eastern half of the U.S. and southern Canada. Some bluebirds in the north migrate south in the winter while others remain in their home territory. Many of our birds remain in our area for the winter unless we get extremely cold and icy weather conditions. Then, they may move a few hundred miles south. Typical bluebird habitat is open land with scattering of trees and low or sparse vegetation.

Our bluebirds presently have made 93 nests containing 283 eggs and 66 chicks. Please send your reports and/or questions to Shirley at saritsema@gmail.com.

Owls at IBK

Lots of growth this week. Capricorn sits by mom after eating in the picture on the right. There was a bit of drama when Luna was looking to a crow's nest for dinner. The crows didn't like this a bit and ganged up and chased her away causing quite the ruckus.

The pictured duo of Dave & Bryan (above) will be performing live music on the Log Cabin porch on Saturday afternoon, May 11, from 1:30-4:30 as part of the IHS annual Discovery Day event. Also in attendance demonstrating their skills will be a blacksmith, a lady at a spinning wheel, and a couple demonstrating the technique of building a log cabin using landscape timbers. There will be a scavenger hunt for the kids and complimentary hot dogs, ice cream and refreshments for all. You do not need to be a member of the IHS to attend, but we'd be happy to have you join! Hope to see you there!

Last December, we were blessed with great weather which allowed for the concrete floor of our barn to be poured. Then, after the January ice storm and frigid weather, we have had nothing but spectacular weather for our barn building efforts. The result is the remarkable progress depicted in the above photo. Stay tuned for further updates as our all volunteer crew continues to amaze with their barn building skills. If you have questions about the IHS, don't hesitate to call Dave at 314.704.7001.

IBK Fishing Club Tips: When shopping at the Market Café & Creamery, don't forget to outfit your fishing. The Innsbrook Fishing club supplies both instruction books and lures. Innsbrook made lures are available, and they are very effective for catching our local crappie. A portion of the proceeds from each sale support the efforts of the Fishing Club.

NATURE NOTES

Understanding Copperheads

If copperheads are a fear factor for you, there is hope and help. Since they don't look like other Missouri snakes, they are easy to identify and avoid.

Missouri's copperheads are pinkish tan with dark-brown markings along their backs that are shaped like an hourglass or bow tie. This camouflage look helps them hide from prey in leaves along rocky hillsides and forest edges. They make excellent exterminators as their diet is mostly mice and voles.

Copperheads are active from April through November, and have young from August through early October. They are not aggressive and seldom strike unless provoked.

Discourage copperheads from around your home by getting rid of wood or rock piles and tall grass. Wear boots when in woods or brushy fields, and leather gloves when moving rocks, old lumber and firewood.

With the upcoming surge of cicadas, be careful when around trees and shrubs, as copperheads enjoy these noisy insects as a late night snack.

Cicadas that shed their skins are a food source for copperheads. These snakes are more active at night during the summertime. They prey on the insects when they emerge from their holes, which can be found around trees.

But, more cicadas does not mean necessarily mean more snakes in your yard. Some people are concerned about seeing more copperhead snakes, which feed on cicadas and other small animals. While they do appear around the same time, there is not significant data proving this correlation.
