Check Your Septic Tank Without Breaking the Bank!

Regular maintenance is key to keeping your home in top condition. If your home is on a septic system, don't forget to schedule a septic tank pumping every two to three years to prevent backups, odors, and costly repairs. To verify your Innsbrook property is on septic and to track the last time it was properly pumped, visit <https://rb.gy/t8vwkp>. Contact Innsbrook Services today to schedule your next pumping appointment by calling ext.9150 or emailing services@innsbrook-resort.com.

Important Information About Your Innsbrook Alarm System

In a continued effort to eliminate malfunctioning and outdated alarm systems, beginning in February 2024, Innsbrook Utilities will be contacting individual residents to inquire about upgrading to the new system or opting out of monitoring. After two months, if the resident has not shown any interest or has opted out, the resident will have their alarms disconnected. Those that have signed contracts for a new alarm system or are actively pursuing an upgrade will continue as planned.

Innsbrook Utilities will reach out to the entire Innsbrook community before the end of the year. At the beginning of 2025, the outdated systems will be turned off completely, except for those in the queue to be upgraded or show active interest in upgrading. This project is designed to lower Innsbrook residents' yearly costs from obsolete systems that are currently maintained for and monitored by Innsbrook assessment funds.

If you are unaware of the type of alarm system your property has and whether updates are needed, please email alarmsystems@innsbrook-resort.com and visit your Property Owner Portal at <https://ibkapps.innsbrook-resort.com/ibk-resident/>.

Owls at IBK

It appears that Luna, our beloved Barred Owl, is ramping up her nesting preparations. Recent observations indicate that as of Monday, February 19, Luna has been dedicating significant time to her nest, spending up to 20 hours inside on certain days. Today, in particular, she has been observed nestled in her nest since the early hours of 2:30 am. While she may have taken breaks outside the nest, it's clear that Luna's focus is shifting towards her nesting duties as the days progress. Keep an eye out for further updates on Luna's nesting journey!

With more cooperation from Mother Nature, the barn crew was able to mark a special milestone event this week. The first crossbeam (the one which will support the loft) was put into place. The picture above shows the new beam being hoisted into position. The mortise and tenon joints from the 19th century went together just like they did when the barn was first built.

For more information about the IHS, visit our website at www.innsbrookhistoricalsociety.org and download the membership application. Membership is the primary source of revenue for the organization. Your support is needed and more importantly, appreciated. If you have questions about membership or any other questions about the IHS, don't hesitate to call Dave at 314.704.7001.

With the progress being made on the barn reconstruction, the IHS needs to remind our visitors of the dangers at the site. Accordingly, the orange fencing (pictured above) was erected to remind visitors to "look from afar!" That is to say, from BEHIND the orange fencing. The beams are secured, but we remind our guests that any construction site is potentially dangerous and we wouldn't want anyone injured while viewing our progress in rebuilding the barn. Thank you!
