FRIENDLY REMINDER: TREE-CUTTING PERMITS ARE REQUIRED

Here at Innsbrook, we love trees, and we know our property owners do too! Just a friendly reminder that tree-cutting on Innsbrook property typically requires a permit. No live trees measuring more than 2" for lots greater than 434 and 6" for lots 1-434 in diameter can be cut down without approval. Especially during winter, it can be hard to tell whether a tree is dead or alive. If you're uncertain, let our experts take a peek before you take an axe to that tree. Permits can be obtained by contacting Nikki Wobbe at ext. 9173, or by emailing her at nikki.wobbe@innsbrook-resort.com.

INNSBROOK HISTORICAL SOCIETY 10TH ANNIVERSARY

Don't miss your opportunity to be a part of Innsbrook History. In ten short years, The Historical Society at Innsbrook has grown from a small group of neighbors with a dream to a village complete with restored 1840s log cabin, a one-room schoolhouse, tobacco barn, pavilion, professional signage and more. But our vision continues. This year, we hope to add a source of potable water and modern washroom facilities to accommodate more visitors and events at the site.

Our schedule of events for 2020 includes:

- April 25: Spring Fling featuring nationally known guitarist and singer Vince Martin. This is our annual member-only event!

Porch Music at the log cabin:

- May 9: The Baker Family (an award winning family Bluegrass band)
- May 23: Hey Dave (eclectic music featuring an accomplished singer and musician, an IBK favorite)
- September 12: Ryanhood Group (a folk rock duo with national recordings)
- September 26: Wildhorse Creek Band (good old fashioned music and fun)

Please consider celebrating our 10-year anniversary with us by supporting the Innsbrook Historical Society. Family memberships start at just $25. Forms are available by visiting our website:

Nature note

HAVE YOU EVER SEEN A DEER ASLEEP?

Innsbrook's deer population always seems to be out and about, and groups of deer may stay close to the same location for a period of time. Do they have nests they return to? Where and how do deer sleep? Those of us who are not hunters may be surprised that deer sleep habits can be complex.

The answer is no – deer do not make nests, but deer are creatures of habit, and they may bed in the same location again and again, especially if they feel safe and comfortable there. Does and younger bucks tend to stick together in small groups and bed near a food source, while mature bucks are more solitary and cautious, choosing to bed in areas that provide the best cover and protection, even when food is not close by. Both bucks and does tend to take water sources into consideration when choosing where to bed, though.

All mammals and birds sleep, but prey species like deer do not have the luxury of sleeping as deeply as predators do. Deer do not enter deep REM sleep; instead, their sleep is what most would call “dozing.” Deer can doze – with eyes open or closed – for as few as 30 seconds to as many as 30 minutes at a time, with most sleep cycles lasting about 10 minutes. While true sleep for deer can be sporadic, deer do spend a significant amount of time bedded down. In between naps, deer rest, regurgitate and chew their cud, and groom themselves.

Deer sleep is followed by a state of intense alertness and, in fact, even dozing deer can remain “alert” to some degree. Deer may tuck their legs under their body and rest their heads on – or tuck their noses under – their legs while sleeping, but their ears always remain at attention, ready to detect the slightest movement or sound of predators.

This is possible because deer's ears are uniquely shaped to take in as much sound as possible, and they can typically hear frequencies of 10,000 more hertz than humans. Deer can also rotate their ears to hear minute sounds without turning their heads. Their ability to hear very slight vibrations and to only sleep for extremely short periods is why many hunters and even biologists who study deer have never seen a deer asleep in the wild!

Have you ever seen a deer asleep? Let us know on social media, or by emailing: miranda.fleschert@innsbrook-resort.com.
